B. Bollag: Summary of Jan Sajko's article Notes on the Experiences of an art teacher in a Romani school, Romano Dzaniben, VI, 3-4, 1999, p. 31-40

Jan Sajko has become widely known because of his extraordinary success in awaking the artistic talent of his primary school students in a very poor Romani settlement in eastern Slovakia. Sajko is employed as an art teacher in the all-Roma public school in Jarovnice, the largest Romani settlement in Slovakia. The settlement, located on either side of a quiet stream, hit the headlines in 1998 when the stream flooded, killing 51 residents. The paintings and drawing of Sajko's students have been shown in numerous exhibits around the world, and won many awards. In this report Sajko says that trying to use standard Slovak teaching methods with students from poor Romani communities often fails, leaving the children feeling incompetent and uninterested in school work. Such children, he says, need more individual attention than do those from more middle class homes. In his art classes, children are encouraged to work at their own pace, and to find pleasure in their creative work. The teacher's aim must be to work with the children from their starting place, use their experiences and points of reference as themes, e. g. „my family,“ “experiences I have had ...“ There is great scope for drawing on the richness of Romani culture. In helping students find artistic themes, Sajko teaches lessons on Romani history, traditional crafts, musical instruments. He invites students to illustrate Romani songs and folk tales. Sometimes the children provide songs or tales, they then translate them into Slovak so the class can discuss ideas for illustrations. Students are encouraged to find their own personal ways of expression, classes are taken to visit art exhibitions. The hardest working and most creative students are rewarded by accompanying Sajko on trip abroad to exhibitions of their work. The aim is always to teach students that through hard work they can change their lives; they are not condemned to the life of poverty and idleness that they see around them.

Ivan Bily, A tale for the art teacher Mr.Sajko, March 25, 1994

Mr. Sajko, everybody likes you in the school. Because during the art class, as if you were a king, you take care for everybody and you like all of us. When flowers on the meadow grow I will give them to you.

Radko Kaleja, Martin Kaleja-Januv, Jozef Cervenak, A letter to Mr. Sajko, Dec 19, 1997

„ Thank you for leading our first steps towards paints and brushes. You have taught us to realize that Roma people are knowledgeable of various things, they do not only drink and stay idle at home. If there were more people like you the Roma people would become different...“
